The Administration and Black Americans

Mr. Leonard Garment's telegram to Bishop Stephen G. Spottswood, chairman of tho board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, is signiflcant less for its understandable expression of injustice and outrage than for its recognition of a tragic reality: the almost complete alienation of the black community from a national administration. "Now, for the first time since Woodrow Wilson." Bishop Spottswood told the 61st national convention of the NAACP, "we have a national administration that can be rightly characterized as anti-Negro... this is the first time since 1920 that the national administration has made it a matter of calculated policy to work against the needs and aspirations of the largest minority of its

This is a devastating indictment, an angry overstatement. It imputes bad motives to mistakon policies. It is not surprising that Mr. Garment, conscious of good intentions, called it "unfair and disheartening." Nevertheless, Mr. Garment and the administration for which he speaks need to understand why Bishop Spottswood's view is widely accepted among politically conscious Negroes and why his rebuttal, however carefully marshaled, is not going to change that view. Mr. Garment cited two steps taken by the administration for the special benefit of blacks. One is the Philadolphia Pian which, as he said. "for the first time is opening up the high-paying construction trades to blacks on a major scale." This is certainly a useful program which, if it is pushed effectively, can do much to promote job opportunities for skilled hlack workers.

Mr. Garment's other claim of a specific benefit to blacks is that the Nixon administration has "named more blacks to policymaking posts than any previous administration." The terminology here is a little too indefinite to make counting possible. But it can hardly be asserted that the Nixon administration has made any black appointments at the level, say, of the Supreme Court or the cabinet or the mayoralty of Washington, Thurgood Marshall, Robert Weaver, Walter Washington were all Johnson Administration appointees.

Even more significant, moreover, is the fact that such men as Cliff Alexander, Leon Panetta and James Allen were squeezed out of posts where they were battling effectively for black rights and interests.

There is, besides, the whole of the "Southern strategy"—a political strategy which beckons into the Republican party the most diohard, anti-Negro olements of the Old South and which, therefore, invites Bishop Spottswood's characterization of the administration itself as anti-Negro. Black leaders could not conceivably view the administration's behavior on school desegregation and Its early opposition to a simple extension of the voting rights law as anything but hostilo to their welfare.

It is a misfortune that the administration appears to have achieved no understanding at all of how deeply offensive to Negroes was the President's nomination of G. Harrold Carswell to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court. That nomination indicated unmistakably a determination in the administration to bring about a change of attitude in the branch of government which has led the way to much of the civil rights progress in recent yoars.

Before Franklin Rooseveit's New Deal, blacks in the Untied States were overwhelmingly committed to the Republican party. It is no accident that they have overwhelmingly turned Democrat-despite the powerfully regressivo influence of Southern legislators in the Democratic party, The fact is that over a period of four decades, the Democratic party has served Negro interests while its Southern faction has made common cause with Republicans in Congress against those

Mr. Garment complains that Bishop Spottswood's candid recognition of these facts "sows distrust and makes our commonly agreed-on goals more difficult to achieve." But he cannot expect Negro leaders to be quiet and complacent. The chasm that now yawns between blacks and their government has tragic implications for the country. Only the administration can bridge it.

An 'Ocean Regime'

in Malta that has been discussing the fate three miles—that once ropresented the range on Indochina. Bruce is an oldneed for some international rogime to govern the sea-but far from precise about just what kind of body is to do so.

This is hardly surprising. The sea was the first area in which a body of international law and international practice was really formulated. The precedents, going back to antiquity, are impressive in volume. But those laws have been honored almost as much in the breach as in the observance, and what has determined their practical validity has been, for the most part, tho realization of a common need rather than any tribunal

There is now a general realization that the soa is not only the highway of commerce but mankind's cloaca maxima, the world's great sewer. As such, it is quite as capable of fouling the teeming millions who live on its borders as of feeding them. The sea urgently needs a sanitary commission—as well as fisherios commissions and police and traffic commissions. But this can hardly be accomplished until there is a general recognition of just where the open sea begins, and just how its riches are to be extracted and Its pollution diminished

President Nixon has taken an imaginative initiative toward achieving these goals, and as a great maritims power, the word of the United States can carry weight. Nevertheless, the boundaries of national jurisdiction on the oceanic borders are in a state of complex

The distinguished, if unofficial, gathering disunity, with claims ranging from the old language of American statements of the world's oceans is very explicit on the of shore-based artillery—to several hundred miles. The matter of onclosed waters (just whon the hoadland-to-headland rule shall apply) is being urgently debated in respect to Arctic passages and olsewhere. The former dependence of fisheries on nearby shorebased facilities has been virtually ended. And earlier. certainly thero is no agreement about the disposal of wastes in the sea, or how these can be controlled. . . .

Yet the whole question of an oceanic regime, responsible to humanity at large rathor tban to the interests of nations with large deep-sea fishing fleets, or those dependent upon oil tankers, or those with excessive amounts of human or industrial wastes. is urgent. Man is exploiting the land to the full. The sea offors hopes of new resources. Man has polluted his air and his rivers, and is rapidly doing the same to the seas around him. A mixture of conservation and intelligent extraction of the ocean's wealth may mean life or death for mankind—and pollution could close that escape valve completely.

One of the counter-arguments to pollution control on land has come from the underdeveloped nations, who argue that smog is a slight price to pay for the industrialization they need so desperately for mere survival. But such a segmented argument cannot apply to the sea, any more than it applies to the poisoning of the atmosphere by the explosion of nuclear devices. Like nuclear testing, oceanic pollution demands global an-

Border Talks

The Chinese government, it seems, has finally decided to accept a Soviet ambassador in Peking again. It would be a bold man who claimed to know what light this sheds on the secret talks the two countries have held on their disputed border. There is no news event that is both more carefully shrouded in mystery and so potentially dangerous to world peace than this one. But one thing at least can probably be deduced with safety, and that is that the talks have not broken down . . .

The Russians probably have the greater interest in this. They are the ones in control of the disputed territories which China claims were taken from her. Any occupying power would tend to prefer complainants to talk rather than fight . . .

But the Chinese, too, have their reasons for going on talking They have made this clear in a number of ways . . .

humor, seif-confidence, wisdom and an ability to see the other man's viewpoint are essentials in a good negotiator, and they are, then David Bruce is an ideal choice to speak for the United States in the Paris talks. To this particular assignment he brings another virtuo: the experience and knowledge of history to keep Vietnam in pro-portion—to know that the United States has other concerns.

At the least, his appointment by President Nixon should devate the chief American negotiator in Paris, piece of cosmetics. Vice-President Agnew is not likely to repeat his vile assault on the patriotism of Averell Harriman and Cyrus Vance, who had the job

The substance is what is in doubt: does the Nixon policy in Indochina offer any hope of a peace settlement with even the most skillful diplomacy?

It may be that the Commumists are not really ready to negotiate anything but total victory for themselves. Like us, they have many lives and reputations invested in this war. Like us, they doubt the word of the enemy. The Cambodian adventure and now increasing Chinese influence make them more likely to see no alternative but a long war.

Basic Propositions

Despite all the discouraging indications, the other side has almost certainly not ruled out a negotiated settlement. But if there is to be any progress in Paris, the American government will have to go some way to meet two basic prowho have followed the talks closely

First, the United States must make elear that at some finite point in time-not tomorrow, perhaps not even a year from now, but sometime—it is going to with-draw sll its forces from Vietnam. That end of the American presence could be tied to several processes: to phased withdrawals, for example, or political developments, or a period of time under a standstill

But there would have to be a neans of persuading the other side that we are really going to get out. Without confidence in that exit. the Communists are unlikely ever to stop fighting. With it, they might agree ou procedures to protect our men as we leave. Second. we must be willing to see a government in South Vietnsm other than the present Thieu-Ky regime. The Communists may well be willing to join with elements of that government in a new political mechanism, but no one who bas talked with them thinks they will ever accept Gen. Thieu or Mar-shal Ky.

Nixon's Hard Stand

The reason is not only the Communists' determination after 25 years of war. They may genuiuely terly sincere in claiming three esfear, if they give up their arms while Thieu and Ky govern, the sort of "blood bath" that President Nixon has warned against if the Communists win. The worst political slaughter in Asia, it should be remembered, was of supposed Commonists in Indonesia. If these two propositions are prerequisites to a settlement, then President Nizon's stated policy gives little ground for hope in Paris. He has refused again and sgain

David Bruce does not shrink from to set any target for total American withdrawal. He has hardened the use of American power, but be is a realist. Their equilibrium is also disturbed by their "special rela-tionship" with their new and distant partner, the United States, for their role is implicitly depen-

The Japanese depend upon Western models in general and the United States directly not only for their economic prosperity and new social patterns. Their very physical security is an American endowment

The U.S.-Japan treaty of mutual recurity and cooperation, there-fore, perpetuates the so-called occupation psychology" and fosters instability. A native authority has remarked; "Japan will be the most unstable element in the world order for the next decades."

Myth and Reality

The Japanese have survived and prospered in their cramped andeconomically-barren islands in good part because of their ability to consecrate myths while recognizing and reacting to the unpleasant necessities imposed by reality. They are, nonetheless, utsential qualities: racial homogeneity, cultural uniqueness, and, above all, indspendence.

Modern Japan does not confuse those deeply feit and constructive virtues with the deliberately cultivated mythology which impelled its campaign of imperial conquest -as did the Hitlerian slogan: "One race, one realm, one leader!" Besides, the Japanese feel they were, at least after 1940, impelled to military aggression by America's dent observes.

TOEYO.—If a Japanese pstriot preventing their economic and were required to characterize ethnic expansion, largely for its own economic purposes.

Racial homogeneity and cultural uniqueness are hardly questionable, though both the people and the civilization are products of some-times masterful and injudicious but usually fortuitous blendings of divergent races and cultures. The Japanese have occupied their bowshaped archipelago off Asla for millennia. They can justly claim homogeneity and uniqueness, though they are hardry the distinct "yamato race"—descendants all of the aboriginal goddess, Ameterasuomi-Kami.

The most fundamental assertion is, however, most open to question. Japanese independence of action is, for the moment, a reality only because the Japanese believe so deeply in their freedom of choice. Japanese freedom of thought, that is, psychological independence is a myth which may not be long

China and U.S.

Japan is the object of intense interest to the two nations toward which she herself entertains the atrongest—if hardly unquali-fled—feelings. Peking would like to bring Japan into an economic and military partnership which would ensure their co-dominion over Asia—under Chinese tutelage. The United States would like to preserve the "special relationship." though its benefits to Washington become more obscure each dsv.

Despite the present fragmentstion of the Japanese left, the Chinese are playing their cards more skillfully. Expressing threats and implying promises. Peking has entranced elements of the Jaca-nese establishment. Above all, the Chinese association appears to politically aroused Japanese youth the best means of attaining true independence in deed and thought. The American appeal, largely economic, most effectively moves the establishment, though it would be naive to discount the enormous attraction of economic abundance and material possessions to Japanese youth. Nonetheless, the American appeal lacks the juster of idealism.

Instead, the United States appears to many Japanese determined to perpetuate the "servile" relationship imposed by the occupa-tion of 1945 to 1952.

His rebuke was intended partly for the President of the United States. President Nixon's unqualified assurances about the enormous achievements of the offensive are not freely endorsed by U.S. officials in Vietnam. The dominant feeling here seems to be uncertainty.

Nevertheless, many of those who speak critically of presidential rhe-toric foel the situation in South Vietnam is better than it was before April 30. For local, tactical reasons, soldiers and civilian officials here generally think tha Cambodian incursions were useful. But many officials, some at the highest levels, think Nixon has vastly overestimated the benefits of the operation. Many say the political cost of the incursions was much greater than their benefits after. According to a reliable

Reporters' efforts to get information on that elusive buildup have met shrugged shoulders or stronger disclaimers from every intelligence agency in

The President's April 30 statement that U.S. forces were attack-ing "the headquarters of the (Communists') entire military operation in South Vietnam" was also heard with skepticism here. Experts on the Viet Cong doubted that a con-ventional headquarters even existed. And many military men thought it was too much to hope to find such an installation.

For example, the President's report of June 30 says bluntly that occur almost exclusively in the the U.S. and South Vietnamese northern half of the country. But forces in Cambodia "completed succesafully the destruction of enemy base areas along the Cambodian frontier." The Army here makes no such claim.

Unentered Area

Officers in the field report that they were able to search only a fraction of the real estate in the known Communist base areas. Many miles of the frontier were never entered by ground forces. Areas where soldiers searched were seldom scoured. "You know," one officer said, "if you walk down a trail (in the jungle), what's four feet away from you, you can't see.

Nixon's report also said: "It is vital to understand... that Hanoi left the United States no reasonable option but to move militarily against the Cambodian base areas." It is difficult to find an American official here who will accept that statement.
The option mentioned most often here was to have let the South Vietnamese do it alone. Numerous officials subscribe to that position. Many senior Americans here even doubted that the invasion of the sanctuaries was necessary. As one veteran of many years in Vietnam put it, "We always knew about the sanctuaries, and we were prepared to cope with them without attacking them." The President has also said re-peatedly that the Cambodian opera-

(The Chine and the Russians have both the new aid agreements with Rand since the Cambodian operation began) The principal fear to American lives one heard in Vietnam before April 30 involved the late stages of Viotnamization, when fewer Americans will be left here with far less protection. It is dr. ficult to see how the Cambodian offensive has made those final stages of U.S. withdrawal any sain. More then the President's assertions are disputed here. The basic impression Nixon has tried to can-vey of the operation—that it was unavoidable, efficient and very effective-does not jibe with the mrpression one gets in Vietnam. Here It is all very cloudy, and still confusing.

It was not a smooth operation It began clumsily, with its planners not knowing how long they coals stay in Cambodia, bow far they could go, or what exactly they were source, officers in the operations section in U.S. headquarters here were asking their intelligence con-terparts where they should send the troops some days after the operation began. And yet, some never exploited in the field.

To the very end, U.S. commanders were unsure wby the President had it was his impression that Nixon made the decision because of the trouble the new Lon Noi government was having.

For all that, the operation seems of certain to have a positive effect events one heard in Vietnam and on the course of the war in souththe interpretations coming out of ern South Vietnam. The Communists will have to develop the supply line down the Sekong and Mekong rivers from Laos into northeastern Cambodia. The enemy's rear will be further back than ever. But the last time the Communists had to move their headquarters, in 1967, they were able to launch the Tet offensive eight months later.

'Orlando Furioso': Play Is Not the Thing

Theater

in Paris

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS, July 6. — "Orlando Furioso, the spectacle being presented by the Teatro Libero of Rome in the huge. cast-iron structure that used to shelter the vegetable market in Les Halles, has proven the favorite offering of the Théatre des Nations program this year. The play evoked so much discussion and drew such a large public the first time around. that it was invited back for additional performances (through Wednesday).

The text is Edoardo Sangui-neti's dramatization of portions of Ariosto's epic poem. the Renaissance equivalent of Virgil's "Aeneid." Chivalric in setting and theme, it recounts the loves and battles of Charlemagne's knights, their grandiose adventures bathed in satirical sidelights. Ariosto, Yippie-like, set making love above making war, but he sang of both, proclaiming in the opening lines of his masterpiece:

Le donne, i cavalier, l'arme, ali amori. Le cortesie, l'audaci impresse these nights. Luca Ronconi, the director, puts on a lively show. He has raised the iron curtain separating actors from the audience and the audience is, at all times, in the middle of the action. There are no seats and the spectators are soon a stampeding throng. There are two stages, one at horses made of tinsel, mounted on rolling platforms, negotiated by a staff of poshers, they charge one another in combat with wooden swords, rushing through the gaping crowd. Lover meets lover as the wheeled floats converge. And above the heads of the audience, a gallant cavalier battles a gigantic dragon which swoops down from the iron rafters. The spectator has to dodge flying platforms, traveling hither and yon with astonishing and awe-inspiring rapidity. Circus Numbers

The burlesque miracles of Ariosto have been reproduced as circus numbers, full of wild. grotesque clowning and staged with keen humor. The action, transpiring as you are chased from pillar to post, is a con-

Ronconi has made amusing use of space, keeping both au-dience and actors on the jump. This permits the mobile spectator to view the crude, comic, energetic free-for-all from varying angles.

The acting is of a broad, barnstorming pattern—as it must be under the circumstances, the production itself being over-blown and becoming unwieldy at times. The players excel as stunt men as they challenge quivering monsters of wire and string, wrestle spears from one another and indulge in lascivious embraces. As vocalists of classic poetry, they scarcely qualify. Their bellowing, augmented by that of the public, echoes so thunderously in the hollow merket that almost all the lines are lost in the din.

As a venture in theatricaliza-tion, this fantasia from Italy, so overflowing with sound end fury, is an arresting experiment rather than an accomplishment of very lofty artistic order. Ronconi in his mise en scene has resurrected the public-square performance of old and crossed it with innovations from a Luna Park funhouse. The novelty is stimulating at first and then, after an hour. begins to become repetitious. But "Orlando Furioso" is worth

In Hong Kong you don't est Chinese, you eat Peking, Shanghai, Swatow, Canton, Szechuan, etc., and choose your restaurants accordingly.

The traditional restaurant is not geared for a tête-à-tête. You reserve a round table for ten or a round table for 12. This big-group way of eating makes it hard on tourists traveling alone or in small parties. Here's where clever, big-time shopping can help you. It is fairly common for an interesting customer to receive a dinner invitation.

The Crystal Palace, up one flight at 16 Cameron Road. Kowloon, is typically Chinese in that it doesn't look like much of a place. However, it serves the best Peking-style food in Hong Kong and Gerald Godfrey gave a dinner party there. browned skin is scored. Each guest takes a square of the skin, places it in a thin riceflour pancake along with the top of a spring onion and a bit of thick soya sauce that tastes like plum jam. You roll the pancake around these morsels and give yourself up to bliss.

No Chinese restaurant in the West that I know of serves Beggar's Chicken, and you can find it at only a few places in Hong Kong. It is the specialty of Tien Heung Lau, 133-140 Woo Sung St. Kowloon, but usually requires advance notice. The telephone number is 662-414. The dish is said to have originated around Hangchow.

Chicken thieves in Northern China would kill their ill-gotten gain, protect it with lotus leaves which would then be coated with mud and buried in a hole in the ground filled with hot coals. At the Tien Heung Lau. a disreputable looking locale with a big reputatioo, a buge lump of clay is smashed before the assembled diners. Investors Taste Bear Market's Bite Wide Slip on Big Board

By Robert A. Wright LOS ANGELES, July 6 (NYT). —A 38-year-old engineer at Lockheed Aircraft Corp, here planned to use the profits from his 300 shares of Lockheed stock as a stake to open a law prac-

The 19-month-long bear market has obvisted that plan. The market value of his stock three years ago was about $22,500. Now, after struggling through law school at nights, he finds his investment amounts to some $2,550. On top of this, the en-gineer, the father of three children, might lose his job because of Lockheed's own financial

Large or Small

Few investors—large or small—have avoided heavy losses in the prolonged stock market slide, which chopped some $300 billion off the value of all stocks from December, 1968, to May,

The Denver man's experience and his reaction to it were widespread in a sampling of investors by correspondents of the New York Times.

There have been some disasters, brokers say, but generally these have not yet affected the smaller investors. Forced adjustment to lower levels of affluence keeping the car for an-other year, cheaper vacations or lost nest eggs—were common. Many more sons may have to work part of their way through college. How does 73-18% capital growth appeal to you.

Pretty much on the face of it you say. Sad markets round the world have made this sort of growth sound unreal. But they're real enough. Our clients in 44 countries have the portfolios to prove it. Stamp portfolios.

Now don't laugh. Stamps are kids stuff no longer. 73.18% between Jan 1'69 and Mar 1'70. That gives you the picture. 9.58% Jan 1 1970— March 1 1970. That gives you the trend.

BPdothings Alaska Style To read the press these days, you'd think that BP was all trekking across the Arctic ice-floes. with a sleigh and a pack of huskies. Well, they were among the very first oil companies to search for oil in Northern Alaska, where the North Slope discovery has now proved to be one of the largest oil-fields in the world. (For the record, BP were also first with the North Sea Gas discoveries). And this was just the prelude for a marketing thrust into the U.S., home of the giants of the oil business. But BP say a little competition never did anyone any harm. BP believe you've got to be as adventurous developing oil as finding it. So they're hammering at the new frontiers. Pioneering a synthetic oil for the Concorde.* Forcing through new pumping techniques on the forecourt. Even using oil to grow protein. BP like to think that the pioneering, thrusting spirit of Alaska is evident throughout everything they do BP do things Alaska style.

Before you invest your money in a mutual fund you should find out what they invest your money in.

When it's your money they're going to invest you ought to be very sure that their choice of investment is at least as good as your choice of mutual fund. No fund, 30, 1970. Most mutual funds invest your money on the stock no matter who manages exchange.

it, can be profitable for its investors if its basic investment is unsound. Some that appear promising to start with may end up diminishing your capital. So before you invest in the future you should find out what happened in the past.

Look at the two graphs. The left one shows how you could have fared last year with a fund that invested your money on the stock exchange. The right one shows how you would have fared with Gramco's* USIF, Real Estate. The world's largest mutual fund investing primarily in choice income-producing property in the USA. Since the inception of the Fund in January 1967 its shares have appreciated by 47.4% (as of May 31, 1970). A steady profitable rate of more than 1% a month.

Real estate investment has proved to be profitable and reliable because everybody needs somewhere to live, to work and to shop. Which means there's always a need for the right kind

Now System/360 gives you System/370.

More scope in real time computing. Bigger storage. Quicker access.

Introducing IBM's System/370 Models 165 and 155.

Two powerful new computers inaugurating System/370. But still in a direct line of evolution from System/360.

System/370 brings more scope.

System/370 opens up a whole new sphere of applications for you. You can set up some of those projects you'd always hoped for. And take on more large scale online projects.

For example, it may be a practical and economic possibility for a firm to link hundreds of branches to one computer centre. Or to have dozens of engineers simultaneously making use of graphic design facili-

Additional time sharing facilities means that more of your creative brains can get on line at the same time.

Your research technicians could study and discuss designs with your workshops hundreds of miles away. At the same time you could be checking the latest inventory status in depots all around the world.

Large Data Base.

1BM System/370 computers have giant main memories with improved data handling capabilities. They can retain at least three times more information on-line than previous systems. And you get your facts even faster. One reason; the new IBM 3330 disk storage system which processes at a data rate of 806 thousand bytes per second.

For example, a bank could keep all the details of half a million accounts in a space as small as five metres by two metres.

Performance.

New applications, new functions and new capacity mean improved performance. With System/370, work you couldn't afford before is now a practical possibility.

Your Investment in Programs and Trained People is Safeguarded.

Best of all, these new computers are fully compatible with System/360. So System/370 has all the experience of System/ 360 behind it. The proven performance. The reliability.

Equally important, your trained people will feel completely at home with System/

370. And your present programs can be run as they are.

Computer Services.

On top of this, we've a full range of support for System/370. You have the flexibility to choose exactly what you want in the way of programs and services.

This will be an even bigger advantage as you move into new advanced applications.

Produced in Europe.

In short, IBM's new System/370 is the answer to today's needs and tomorrow's growth. The answer for Europe. And from Europe. System/370 is produced by co-operation between IBM centres in Havant. England; Montpellier, France; and Mainz. Germany.

System/370 is something you can't afford not to know about. Call your nearest IBM office and get all the details.

BLONDIE I'M SO MAD, DAGWOOD MY BANK STATEMEN ARRIVED TODAY

By Alan Truscott

Some delicate bidding was required on the diagramed deal: Even looking at the North and South hands it is not easy to judge what the contract should be.

The simple and safe course is for North-South to play in three no-trump. diamonds Six would unsound and would wrecked immediately by spade lead. But six clubs seemed to have fair prospects. After a spade lead the declarer can maneuver immediately to discard his spade loser on the diamond king.

He must then, however, be able to avoid the loss of two trump tricks, which cannot be done as the cards lie. The chance of a favorable division—three-three or doubleton ten-is a little better than 50-50. But the slam is slightly worse than an evenmoney bet because of the chance that West has 10 x-x in clubs combined with a doubleton diamond, in which case an eventual diamond lead from East will promote the ten.

Many expert partnerships say that a major-suit bid after a response of two clubs to one diamond is not a reverse and can be a minimum opening. North was therefore entitled to bid twd spades on the second round, although two diamonds followed by a spade bid might have been more descriptive.

South's two no-trump was a waiting bid, forcing in his style, and North rebid his diamonds. three hearts and four dia-monds, hoping for a slam, but finally permitted his partner to end the proceedings in four no-trump. West led the spade four which South was able to win with the jack. He cashed the diamond ace, led to the heart king, and continued diamonds to make 12 tricks.

ABORTION: LAW, CHOICE AND MORALITY By Daniel Callahan. 524 pp. Macmillan. $14.95. Reviewed by John Leonard

DANIEL CALLAHAN - director of the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences, former executive editor of Commonweal magazine, and a Doctor of Philosophy from Harward-began this book four years ago with the intention of "defending, with some modifi-cations, the traditional Western prohibition against abortion. His own formidable researches caused him to change his mind. He now believes that the State has no right to refuse an abortion to a woman who wants one, and he proposes permissive legislation to that effect.

Naturally, such a change will displease those Roman Catho-lic and Protestant conservatives who insist that the fertilized egg is a human being, and that to interfere with it after implantation is to commit murder. But to change one's mind isn't necessarily to reverse all one's perceptions and convictions.
His book will also displease who subscribe to Grace Atkinson's notion that the woman is an artist, that "her reproductive function and the fetus constitute her prop-erty," and that she can destroy the fetus as she might destroy a painting up to the point at which she decides to confer "child-status" or "personhood"; on it by expelling it from her body. Dr. Callahan believes that what is (or should be) legal may not always be moral Legality is a shifting process of accommodation. If legal abortions do not threaten a society, and he demonstrates that they do not, then the individual right of a woman to control her own body and plan her own family takes precedence. But is abor-tion the only way to protect that right? Shouldn't society see to it that other options are available? And, in the process, shouldn't society grapple with the genuine moral issues raised in the abortion debate?

For abortion is a moral problem. As Thomas Seasz has said: "To be sure, the procedure is surgical; but this makes abortion no more a medical problem than the use of the electric chair makes capital punishment a problem of electrical engineering." (And Szasz supports legalized abortion.) What do we mean by such phrases as "the sancity of life?" Can secular and religious apprehensions of that sanctity be brought into useful approximation? Dr. Callahan argues (and I agree) that the effort to do so, drawing on all our resources in science, philosophy and history, is crucial. Should "life" be defined only as what a majority of voters in any political subdivision decides it to be, then we enter a universe pediency, and can go about defining black people. South-east Asians, Indians, the aged, infirm, long-haired and ideologically delinquent as not quite up to our standards.

Dr. Callahan weighs the arguments against a bortion (legitimate medical and psychological - reasons are rare; a better society could take care of secio-economic problems; nobody can agree on when "life" actually starts) and the arguments for it (women's rights: overpopulation; the butchery of flegal abortions under restrictive systems)-and concludthat the balance favors permit siveness.

But he digs his heels in certain abstractions: While abortion may serve the land able end of our "control of the kind and quality of human Me it is at best "to be looked upon with ambivalence. .. Any meth od which requires the taking of human life, even though life be far more potential than actual, falls short of the ha man aspiration, in manking better moments, of dignifying and protecting life."

I have no doubt that most people, whether or not they an prove of abortion, will appre ciate the data in Dr. Callaban book more than they will an preciate the scruples. We are after all, coming around to women aren't prepared to de in behalf of male definitions of female roles; that contract tion has not only aftered sermi roles, but philosophical cap gories as well; that the natural law, knowing what we no know about nature, isn't quit good enough for man (or ra ture)—and why, some migh ask, doesn't Dr. Callahan bro ture)-and why, some about the "Just War" theory or racism or something impo tant?

To which I think he wo answer: every issue has ; scruple: the scruples come ignore the scruple while rid the issue is to sow the Zeitzes and reap the disaster. Who makes "Abortion: Law Chor and Morality" the valuable bo It is, is the fact that it take morals seriously. To define what's right, to choose to do i to help create a world in which and might survive ... these are endeavors as worthy as the are rare, in philosophy and a politics and in private life

Irreproachable Paunch of DARIS.—There are two Waverley Roots. Both are American and both have reached their finest flower in Prance. Both, as a motter of fact, have grown on the same stem. When it arrived in Paris in 1937, in the guise of a hungry young newspaperman, the stem weighed 13a pounds. That was the first Waverley Root. The second Waverley Root took shape gradually, and by the late 1950s was in full fig. This additional persona. though it weighed just under a hundred pounds, was no mere sapling but the product of intense cultivation. Today. 43 years after transplantation. The Waverley Roots-age 65, gross weight 232 pounds, are thriving-and almost inseparable. "I've thought about doing a book on visitor. "On the latter phase of his career, that is: but my agent won't let mc. He says nobody's interested in De Root thinks his agent is wrong, but he sees no point, at this stage, in arguing about it. Rool's interest in De Gaulle is oot hard to understand. Both cherish "a certain idea of France." The Geoeral, of course, had a head start, but Root's love affair with Prance has been almost as passionate. He is a living rebuke to those faint-hearted swains. Americans and others, who, after a year or two lo Paris, return gibbering to the calm of Manhattan or Chicago. After more than half a lifetime in France, pursuing ooe of the least restful of occupations. Dressed for an evening out -curried and combed, dark-suited-he could be an advertisement for the Quai d'Orsay. At home on the Left Bank, comfortably elegant in dark-red cardigan and small-checked sport shirt, scotchaud-water in hand, he is an object lesson in how to survive the Age of Anxiety. In either place, he is the least self-impressed of celcbrities.

To go back a little, and defoliate the thicket of metaphor with which this piece began: Waverley Root's first career started in that pre-electronic era when foreign correspondents really mattered. You can see bow far back he goes, That was in the late Tweotles; thus he was cootemporary with the Lost Generatioo without quite being part of it. Mostly, one assumes, because he was too busy working to be Lost-as a correspondent for American newspapers, a staff meoiber of the Chicago Tribune's Paris edition, a correspondent for Copenhagen's Politiken, later a radio network reporter. From 1955 until 1967 Root was the Paris correspondent of The Washington Post. By the time he left The Post to devote more time to serious eating. he bad consolidated an international reputation as a distinguished, but not showy. correspondeot and news analyst.

He had also consolidated the most irreproachable paunch (the line of duty?) in American journalism, with the possible exception of the late A. J. Liebling's. Liebling and Root were old friends and dining companions. At the Root flat the other evening, wheo Liebling's name came up in cooversation, someone re-membered that he was a cook as well as a gastronome, and Root was asked if he bimself cooked. He hesitated for a moment, as his slim, soignée wife Colette wntched smilingly, and seemed to lose a trifle of his sang-frold. "We won't mention the pumpkin pie, he said finally, with a grin, an eye on his wife. I was the only one who ate it."

The ocoversation returned to other people's cooking. Root's "Paris Dining Gulde," published in paperback last year by Atheneum and doing nicely, has been justly praised as perhapa the best thing of its kind ever done. But an argumeotative visitor picked a bone with the book's opening sentence: "There are 13,000 restaurants in Paris, of which at least 10.000 are good .

"Well, let's see," the visitor said. "That leaves 3.000 bad- restaurants. Which means Paris has more bad restaurants than Pittsburgh, say, has restaurants. That would seem to make Paris the badrestaurant capital of the world . . . "

Root, nobody's patsy, just grinned, Pressed, he conceded that his judgment of a "good" restaurant, like everybody else's, is bound to be subjective.

2 Bad Meals

But what about those 3,000 other restaurants? What are they, if oot bad? They are "not-good restauraots," Root, though still in cardigan and sport shirt, could have been speaking not from his sofa but from his desk at the Qual d'Orsay. A momeot later he clinched a ministerial appointment there. Still on the subject of good restauraots and bad restaurants, he said the only two really bad meals he remembered in France were both served at two-star restaurants. Which ones?

Father Christmas twinkled a little. Ah. Which oues indeed? Well, they're in somebody's guidebook. But it's obviously oot Waverley Root's 'Paris
